[For the Orangeburg Times.]
A State University.

Mr. Editor:

There seems to be some little disposition now for greater efforts in the advancement of the cause of education. And well there may be. The colored people are deeply interested and I am glad to see have been making great efforts to obtain the advantages which education brings. The novelty of the matter may be one cause of their zeal, but it matters not what may be the cause, the fact should arouse the whites to redoubled application.

The students graduated from Claflin will soon, many of them, go out as teachers, and they will have a powerful effect in elevating their race.

In the same way the young men who are yearly coming out from Wofford, Furman University, and Newberry College, as well as the young ladies from the excellent female institutions of the State will shed an influence for good wherever they go.

But these are all, or most of them, denominational institutions, and while they are doing much good to their respective denominations, and through them to the community, they cannot have the State influence that an independent College or University would have. The Baptists may be justly proud of Furman University, the Methodists of Wofford, and the Lutherans of Newberry College, but with all the liberality that the respective faculties may profess, and conscientiously endeavor to use, there will necessarily be an influence which tends to circumscribe within sectional walls. However it may be denied, each will, perhaps involuntarily, seek to illustrate its own tenet.

We want a broader education, an expansion of human thought, a more Catholic spirit, and a State influence going abroad to illustrate South Carolina. With this view, let the Board of Education appointed by the Legislature make haste and open the old South Carolina College. Her influence will be felt as long as the great men who have emerged from her classic walls will be remembered by a grateful people. Hon. Samuel Dibble of this County we believe is on this State Committee. If so, we appeal to him to do his part toward this great end.

How is it that the work has commenced by the State on the colored people at Claflin, and we hear nothing of the institution for the whites? Few realize the great power which a State College gives a State. It was South Carolina's bulwark in the past, and its absence will be her deterioration in the future.

At another time Mr. Editor I will follow up your editorial on "County Graded Schools." Don't imagine that the failure, or at least smallness of the Teachers Convention is an indication of a want of interest in the cause of education on the part of our people. This interest is manifesting itself and will continue to manifest itself—and probably in a more effective way.

A TEACHER.

Will He Go to the Senate?

A rumor that Ex-President Davis will be elected to the United States Senate. What Mississippi Republicans say.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Well informed Republicans from Mississippi say there is no question but Jefferson Davis will be returned to the United States Senate if he lives and his disabilities are removed. All indications point very strongly in that direction, and many Democrats from the same State do not deny that Davis will be a candidate. They say that it all rests with him, and that if he is a candidate the Mississippi Legislature cannot refuse to elect him. The friends of Mr. Davis here feel a little sore that his possible election to the Senate should afford amusement and comfort to the Republicans. They say that Davis was not an original secessionist, and that he was no more responsible for the rebellion than any one of a thousand Southern men who might be named, many of whom are now living, and some holding high positions under the government. They allege that Davis did no more in support of the Confederacy than Alexander H. Stephens, the Vice President, who is received with open arms in the government councils. Lamar, in a recent speech in the Senate, said that Davis did no more for the success of the Southern cause than he (Lamar) did, only that Davis had greater ability, but each did all that he could.

It is said by his friends that should he be chosen to the Senate his course will be such as to disarm passion and criticism; that he will not be in his seat three months before it will be shown by his speeches and vote that his presence is conducive to harmony and good fellowship between the sections; in other words, that he will become the leader of the moderate men from his section, and win back the respect which he always had in the North before the war. It is cited that when the Vice President of the Confederacy was returned to the House there were mutterings of discontent and sharp criticism in the North, but that he had not been in his seat a year before he became one of the most popular of Southern men, viewed from a Northern standpoint, and that to day no Southern Democrat has the good will and respect of the North to a greater degree than Mr. Stephens.

A Crazy Doctor.

On Tuesday afternoon a rather good-looking and well-dressed white man, about 40 years of age, arrived in the city and registered himself at the Charleston Hotel as "Dr. D. Mack, Atlanta, Ga." He was put in a third floor room, with the windows opening on Pinckney street. The stranger did not show himself much, but retired rather early. Yesterday morning about 5 o'clock, however, the policeman on duty in the neighborhood witnessed what might be called an eruption from one of the windows opening on Pinckney street. A mattress was first pitched out, then two chairs, then two pillows and a bolster, and finally a looking-glass. He called the attention of the hotel clerk to the fact, and a rush was made for Dr. Mack's room. The officials found it bolted and locked on the inside, but after parleying awhile they were admitted. The proprietor of the hotel asked his guest why he had thrown the things out of the window, to which he replied that he had done so because they wanted to kill him by putting him in a bed with yellow fever in it. The proprietor asked him if he thought the chairs had yellow fever in them, too, to which the doctor replied yes. When he asked if he thought the mirror also had yellow fever he replied no, but he had thrown it out because somebody on the outside wanted it. The doctor was then taken to the station house where he was confronted with a bill for about $70 for board and damages. Upon his examination before the Recorder it was evident that the man was insane, and at the suggestion of Mr. Jackson he was sent to the hospital. He was sane enough, however, to give the address of some of his relatives in New York, who were telegraphed to, and who answered. On his person was found about $17 in money a through ticket from Atlanta to New York. He will be held until further orders from his relatives or friends.—News and Courier.

A negro preacher in Cow Grove described hell as ice cold, where the wicked froze to all eternity. Being asked why, he said: "Cause I don't dare tell dem people nuffin else. Why, if I say hell was warm, some of dem old rheumatic niggers would be wantin' to start down dare de very tust fros."

How to Tame Woman.

Yesterday morning a man whose every look proved how hungry and penniless he was, halted before an eating stand at the Central Market to let his mouth water for a while. The woman knew his worth and called out:

"Come, be jogging along. You won't get any food here unless you have the cash."

"My dear woman," he confidentially began as he drew nearer, "I am not hungry; I just left the breakfast table, after the heartiest meal I ever ate. I was not looking at your beautiful meats, your lovely cakes, or your rich and juicy pies, but at yourself."

"What you looking at me for?"

"I was wondering," he said, "if you were any relation to Lady Clare, of England. You have the same brown eyes, same beautiful hair—same sweet accent."

"I never knew her," replied the woman, as her face began to clear up.

"Didn't, eh? Well, I never saw two faces nearer alike in their sweet expression. I wish I had your portrait painted on ivory—really wish I had." She handed him half a pie and a piece of meat, and as he sauntered off she began hunting around for a piece of broken mirror.—Detroit Free Press.

Lincoln and Fighting Democrats.

Gen. Steedman's speech in Ohio Convention:

"I make another statement here to-day—and there is a living witness in the State of Ohio who was present when Mr. Lincoln made the utterance. The first time I ever saw him was after the battle of Chickamauga, when I was ordered by telegraph to report in person to him. I went up and called upon him, and James M. Ashley, who is living, heard the conversation.

Mr. Lincoln took me by the hand, greeting me very warmly, and told me he was glad to see me. Still holding me by the hand he said to Mr. Ashley: 'Brother Ashley, what would have become of us in this war had it not been for the fighting Democrats from the North and West?' [Prolonged applause.]

With a shrug of the shoulders, Mr. Ashley said:

"Mr. Lincoln, I don't know."

Mr. Lincoln replied: 'I believe our rebel friends would have their flag floating at the Capital, sir.' [Applause.]

He said: 'The truth is, Brother Ashley, that our party is made up, to some extent, of the religious and sympathetic, and they don't make first-class soldiers.' [Laughter and applause.]

Dear to Every Heart.

Dr. Lilienthal recently stepped into a school room during a recitation in geography, and was invited by the teacher to ask the class a few questions. He courteously complied.

"What is the capital of Pennsylvania?"

"Harrisburg."

"What is the largest city in Pennsylvania?"

"Philadelphia."

"What building is there in Philadelphia that is dear to the heart of every patriotic American citizen?"

That was a poser; the class was troubled, but made no answer. The doctor repeated the question.

"I know," said a little fellow on a back seat, as he stretched up his arms to its full length.

"Tell us what it is then, my boy," said the doctor.

"The Mint," was the confident answer.

If the Democracy fail to renominate Tilden in 1880 its death knell will be sounded. It will deserve to die in disgrace and infamy, and every member of the party will hang his head in shame.—New Albany (Ind.) Ledger-Standard.
